Who Killed the Cow?

John H. Johnson, of Burdett, was summoned on Tuesday last week before Police Magistrate Brown at Bow Island, under Sec. 30 of the Motor Vehicle Act, with striking a cow on the highway from Burdett to Bow Island and failing to return to the scene of the accident.

The prosecution was conducted by P. O. McKenna, barrister, of Bow Island, and Mr. Fraser, of Medicine Hat, undertook the defence.

Geo. H. Johnston, J.P., of Burdett, occupied a seat on the bench at the invitation of the presiding magistrate. In answer to the charge preferred against him, defendant pleaded not guilty.

Giles A. Lyons, age 11, son of W. O. Lyons, of Burdett, gave evidence to the effect that he went to get the cow on the evening of September 8, from Rygg's field, and he drove it down to as far as the graveyard. He saw a car coming and stepped off the road to avoid it. The auto struck the cow and he called out to the occupants to stop, but they did not do so. He then went towards the cow and after standing there a few minutes Mr. Proctor came up on his bicycle. They examined the cow and found its leg was broken. He recognized the man John Bishop as the one who was driving the car. Another man named Bishop was with him. There was about ten o'clock at night. He recognized the car which Johnson was driving as a Ford, and it was going between 30 and 40 miles an hour. Another car came along a few minutes after, but that didn't stop either.

Witness was here seized with a fainting spell and had to retire from the court room.

Mr. Proctor recalled the evening of September 8th, and said he saw that evening Mr. Johnson and Mr. Bishop in the pool hall at Burdett. They were talking about going to Bow Island. He started away on his bicycle and got about three-quarters of the mile to town when they passed him in a car, to reply to the defending solicitor, Proctor said he got off his bicycle because he knew Johnson as a reckless driver, but when pressed confessed that he had only seen him driving on one occasion.

He should judge that their car was travelling between 30 and 40 miles an hour. Another car came along a few minutes after which he thought was a McLaughlin. He afterwards saw Giles Lyons where the cow was found about a quarter of a mile from the graveyard. He looked the cow over and saw its leg was broken. They got it up and went a short distance and then it laid down again. The cow was lying on the right side of the grade coming from town.

Under examination, witness proved very contradictory. He said he saw the cow first when he got up to it, and then corrected himself by saying he saw it first from the top of the hill. He recognized Johnson and Bishop by their figure. Would ever Johnson was on the right hand side of the car driving from town.

W. O. Lyons gave evidence to the effect that he and Mr. Lowellyn went out and examined the cow and found its leg broken. He saw defendant after that and spoke to him. He asked whether he had hurt the cow and he said he had not. He then asked him how his front axle got bent, and he replied that it was bent when they were hauling the car up from the river. The witness also noticed that the fender and radiator were bent, and the defendant said that the car had had two or three mishaps. Two or three parts from the car were picked up near the scene of the accident to the cow and he asked Johnson to allow him to compare with the parts on his car. If they didn't fit he was prepared to publish a notice in the Bow Island Review, exonerating him from all blame. Johnson, however, gave no inclination to talk about it, and said "he was fed up with it," or something to that effect.

David Hall, who accompanied Mr. Lyons to the garage to see the defendant, corroborated the former witness' statement. He noticed that two pieces missing the radiator down were gone and also noticed a part of the fender bent.

Johnson, when put into the box in his own defence, stated that he kept a garage at Burdett for it, a Heattie of Bow Island. He swore that on the night in question he did not strike the cow. He did not see the cow. He was driving about eighteen miles an hour. He was sitting on the left hand side of the car to drive. The axle of the car was bent previous to his recollecting it that morning. He left Burdett about 10:20 and reached Bow Island about eleven o'clock.

Frank M. Bishop, barber, of Burdett, called by the defence, stated he accompanied Johnson on his trip to Bow Island. He saw no cow, no boy, nor did he see any bicycle.

After summing up by the barristers for the defence and prosecution, the magistrate said although suspicion pointed to Johnson, there was not, however, enough evidence to convict, and the defendant would therefore be discharged.

Spanish influenza, which during the past spring and summer ravaged Britain and France, and was counted one of the worst epidemics appearing in those countries for many years, has crossed the ocean and is now upsetting the peace and calm of easterners in both the United States and Canada. In fact, so serious has the disease become in United States army camps that the government has undertaken its suppression as a war measure.

According to Ontario's official health officer the disease is an acute febrile infection, the incubation period is three or four days' duration resembling influenza. It is not contagious.

Symptoms are a sudden onset with chill, severe headache, with pain in the back and limbs, and a general feeling of malaise. The face is flushed, the lips appear on the lips in some cases. The fever runs from 99 to 102 degrees, and occasionally 103 to 104 degrees. The highest point is reached on the second day, when there is a sudden drop, and by the fourth day the patient is well.

Many cases develop a harsh cough with thick sputum, and some cases develop into pneumonia. The period of fever, as well as the short course of the disease, is shorter than in ordinary influenza, and there are less gastro-intestinal symptoms. The disease is spread by germs carried in the nose and throat, and the infection is generally passed from one person to another by direct personal contact, drinking utensils, use of common towels, etc.

INFLUENZA WARNING

Protect your nose and mouth in the presence of sneezers.

An Advertisement by Charles Dickens

CHARLES DICKENS is one of the world's great teachers. Here is what he has to say in one of his books:

"My other piece of advice, Copperside, add Mr. Micawber, 'you know. Annual income $30, annual expenditure $19.6—result, happiness. Annual income $20, annual expenditure $20.0—result, misery. The blossom is blighted, the leaf is withered, the God of Day goes down upon a dreary scene, and—in a short, you are forever floured. As I am."

The saving of a part of one's income was always a good policy.

Prudent men and women have always maintained a margin of saving.

But to-day we must go further in our efforts to save than ever before.

To-day it is a matter of the gravest importance that each Canadian seek ways and means to economize by cutting down expenditures for unnecessary things, saving the money he spends on things he could do without, so that when the Nation needs to borrow money he will be in a position to do his full duty.

There is war-shortening work waiting for every dollar that can be saved.

IF Charles Dickens were writing to Canadians to-day he would probably give us advice to this effect.

"My other piece of advice, Canadians, you know. No matter what percentage of your annual income you have previously saved, your efforts to-day should be to save more. The advantage of so doing is twofold. By the practice of economy you conserve the material and labor which must be devoted to the grim task before us; you cultivate the precious habit of thrift; you gather more and more money to lend to the Nation for the prosecution of the way to a quick and certain Victory."

Mr. and Mrs. G. R. Darrington left on Tuesday to reside at Vancouver.

Mrs. Wm. Fall and Mrs. H. Longden of Tabor are the guests of Mrs. G. H. Robinson during the Chautauqua.

The members of the L.D.S. church conducted a trial on Saturday night relative to the marriage recently of one of their adherents, Millard Huff, to his aunt. The members decided that Huff had acted against the rules of the church and he would therefore be deprived of his membership.

The citizens of Burdett have decided to have a formal opening of the magnificent new school building which has been the result of recent consolidation. This important event will be celebrated on Saturday, October 16th, by sports in the afternoon in which everyone may have a chance to enter. Entries will be classified according to age, to there will be a place for everyone. At the conclusion of the sports the ladies of the C.F.W.A. will serve supper and after supper will be favored by an address from the Minister of Education or his representative. The best part of the program, however, has been left to the last. This includes an education contest in which the pupils of all the school districts within a radius of fifteen miles are invited to take part. The education will be followed by a concert of musical selections by local talent. It may be added that the C.F.W.A. are co-operating on a large scale to make this day a success and one to be remembered as a great event in the history of Burdett. Do not fail to be present.

OBITUARY

Mrs. M. A. Rowe, whose death has already been briefly recorded in these columns, was born on September 28th, 1843, in the State of Wisconsin. She came to reside in Canada about ten years ago and elected to take up her residence at Burdett, where she and her family she went through all the vicissitudes and trials of pioneer life, and finally by her brave spirit and fortitude emerging into a state of comparative affluence.

The family of the deceased had included thirteen children, four of whom, however, had passed away, thus leaving nine surviving. All of these latter were with their mother both during her illness and at her death. Three of her sisters and a cousin, living in different parts of the States, were also present.

The deceased passed away at Medicine Hat on September 22nd, after a long spell of sickness. Her body was brought back to Burdett and on the Thursday was taken into Bow Island where religious mass was celebrated over the remains in St. Nicholas church, the Rev. Father Fitzpatrick of Medicine Hat officiating. Leaving the church the procession returned and returned to Burdett where interment took place in the local cemetery.

The casket containing the remains bore numerous offerings of beautiful flowers, some of which arrived from a considerable distance, and besetokened by their presence a sincere regard and the deepest sympathy with the family from a large number of friends and relatives.

The pall-bearers comprised five sons of the deceased, viz., Henry, John, Felix, Vincent, and Leo, and one nephew, S. J. Hildie.

As indicating the great esteem in which the deceased lady was held in the district, it may be added that no less than forty automobiles were included in the funeral procession, the occupants of all of which by their kindly expressions of sympathy conveyed to the bereaved relatives how deep was the sense of regret felt by the whole community at the loss of one whom they all mourned as deeply and as sincerely as though she had been a near and dear relative.

Annual Meeting.

It has been possible under the efficient management and definite plans and ideas of the officers of a society co-ordinated with the coöperative activity of working members.

Now that we are still lingering on the threshold of another year, the newly elected officers desire to express their sincere gratitude to each member of the society for the trust they have reposed in them, and wish that their acts may always justify the trust so placed.

In this new year, contributions of both funds and supplies must be sought, if possible tripled, if Red Cross needs are to be met. It remains with the citizens of Bow Island to individually assist in this great work. Let the number of our sewing units, to increase our membership fees, to keep the needs of the Red Cross persistently before the public and to double our contributions. If you not work for patriotic reasons work under the pressure of necessity. The need is urgent and must be met.

Lenine's Insanity

None of His Hopes Have Been Fulfilled

Practically insane with their dreams of the proletarian millennium, which seemed at hand, Lenine and his associates started at nothing and forced an immediate revolution which would permit them to get on with the social revolution. For this they called the army to support, raised the mob, started civil war, which cost lives and factions were trying to prevent, and published the secret treaties of the allies in order to bring the leaders of the war into discredit with the proletarian world. But when the Lenine's hopes were fulfilled. The allies were refused to stop the war at his bidding, and not even his wicked Russia could force them to make peace. The German proletariat did not rise, as he expected, and at Brest-Litovsk the Bolsheviks were compelled to sign an unjust and humiliating treaty with the Germans. Never was there a statesman more completely discredited than Nicholas Lenine.

Jam Shortage in Britain

Only about one ounce of jam per week is available to the civil population of Great Britain at the present time. Canadian jam makers are making all the jam they possibly can to facilitate conservation of butter, which will be the more needed overseas because of the jam shortage there.

A Cyclist's Brave Deed

Saved the Life of Young Lieutenant By Quick Action

An army motorcycle at one of the American training camps recently averted the death of a young lieutenant by a most extraordinary feat of heroism, says the Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Each day the training camp is a rough ground, he drove his machine into a runaway parachute that was dragging the officer to his death. The latter had made a practice jump of 2,000 feet, and he was on a high wire, and he was on a high wire, and he was on a high wire.

Adopting the "Yanks"

Queen Alexandra has consented to become patroness of the scheme for sending home comforts to the soldiers at the front, and to a letter to Sir Charles Walston, the chairman, Her Majesty says:

"The scheme is provided for the splendid American fighting soldiers at the front. I think it is a fine one. As their relations and friends are so far away, let us take their place. It will give me the greatest pleasure to become patroness of such an organization, and I will do my best to help towards it."

The methods of helping to put the American soldiers on an equal footing with the allied comrades will be by "adopting" (including correspondence) and by the sending of non-rational comforts.
